Welcome

Welcome lovely followers!!!!

This is our very first look book ever and we are more than excited to show you guys all the outfits we've put together for Thanksgiving. There are four outfits from each of us, and they start out from the most casual to the most dressy.

For each outfit there is a description, a key for where we found all the items and a song we think suits the outfit in general. Some of the songs may be a bit far fetched but hey, we're just trying to bring you some good music.

We sincerely hope that you enjoy our first ever Look Book, and if you have any ideas for future ones, leave them in the comments!!

- Lauren & Eleni

Who says curvy girls can't wear shear tops? This black top has a shear panel from mid waist down to mid thigh. The panel allows for a flowy silhouette and exposes a little bit of skin (but not too much). Eleni paired it with high waisted blue dark wash jeans, military boots, and a vibrant statement necklace for some extra oomph. This outfit can be worn for a casual Thanksgiving get together with friends.

Lauren is nuts for neutrals year round, and when autumn arrives, her obsession hits an all time high. She pairs a simple white blouse with tan flats and dark wash jeans for an amped up white tee and jeans look. To brave the cool October winds, she pulls on a thick cashmere sweater that ties at the waist (if that doesn't say Fall I don't know what does). This outfit is perfect for running errands before a family get together, or for enjoying apple cider with your girls.

Eleni LOVES her colours, and this outfit is no exception. This ensemble screams fall and Thanksgiving, and can be worn for making pumpkin pies with mama. Eleni paired a crisp white button down with clusters of burnt orange flowers, with high waisted blue dark wash jeans, and a blood orange cardigan. She made the outfit more casual by rolling up the cuffs and knotting the blouse. To finish off her look, Eleni pulled on her trusty pair of army boots.

Nothing says fall like pumpkins, and pumpkins are orange, and orange also says fall. If you haven't noticed, burnt orange is one of Lauren's favourite accenting colours. Here, she's paired a silk blouse with, you guessed it, orange accents, with dark washed skinnies and nude pumps. This outfit is perfect for brunch with your friends on a brisk autumn morning, or for exploring downtown in all it's autumn glory!

You may have seen this dress before, think long and hard! That's right! You've seen it on Eleni at her cousin's bachelorette party! Today she's paired it with: grey tights to keep out the cold, a light wash denim vest, and her trusty army boots (can you see a trend?) A simple, but super cute outfit like this can be worn to a Thanksgiving bunch with family, or for walking around downtown and admiring the city in all it's autumn brilliance!

There is never a wrong time for a pencil skirt (or Shakespeare). In fact, the time for a pencil skirt is always, and Lauren takes this rule very seriously. Here, she's paired her favourite red skirt with a ruffle collared polka dot blouse, nude pumps and her monogram necklace (the obsession continues). This outfit is perfect for a Thanksgiving dinner date with your guy, or helping your mom put the finishing touches on the dining room. Whatever your case, you're sure to look like a sexy teacher and that's rule number two. There is never not a time to look like a sexy teacher. Never.

Nothing says autumn like orange and green, so, it seemed only natural, for Eleni to accent her neutral oatmeal Junarose dress with them. These pops of colour enhance a simple dress and give it a lot of personality. She finished off the look with some simple grey tights, and army boots. This outfit is perfect for walking about with family after eating your heart out at Thanksgiving dinner.

Plaid is a fall staple. So are pearls. So are dresses. So is blue. As you can see, this outfit is made up of almost every fall staple imaginable. Lauren has paired her favourite plaid dress with pearls and a crisp white button down underneath (classy music teacher anyone?) For a pop of colour, Lauren introduced some bright blue heels. This outfit is perfect for a Thanksgiving diner surrounded by loved ones.
